65th ABW reorganizes: OSS goes to LG, COMM to Support Group

SSgt. Rosaire Bushey
Editor

The 65th Communications Group became the 65th Communications Squadron Wednesday afternoon after Lt. Col. Roy King relinquished command of the unit to Col. Rod Gibson, 65th Air Base Wing Commander.

Following relinquishment of command, Gibson redesignated the unit as a squadron under the 65th Support Group and applauded the Communications Group's success in doing more with substantial manpower reductions which was the driving reason forcing the redesignation as a squadron.

Maj. Gary Kemp then assumed command of the squadron in a ceremony presided over by 65th Support Group Commander, Col. Segundo Pereira.

"In conjunction with the objective wing structure, communications squadrons are aligned under the support group," said Maj. Don Tobin, 65th CS Missions Systems Flight Commander.

While the support group added a new squadron during the afternoon ceremony, it lost one Wednesday morning when the 65th Operations Support Squadron realigned under the 65th Logistics Group.

The OSS will keep the same commander and name, it will have a new chain of command.

According to Gibson, realigning the OSS to the Logistics Group was the right thing to do to better align OSS maintenance functions under the LG community and to better balance the sizes of the three wing groups.

First Lady makes stop to visit with Team Lajes

The United States' First Lady, Hillary Clinton made a three hour stop-over at Lajes Field Sunday on her way back from European stops that included Austria and the Portuguese mainland.

While here Mrs. Clinton read to about two dozen children at the library; spoke to a combined meeting of the officer and enlisted wives clubs; and gave a speech before departing for Washington.

She said the president was aware of the crucial role played by Lajes Field and appreciated the sacrifices made by the men and women stationed here and their families.

Brigadeiro Jorge Costa, Headquarters Azores Air Zone Commander, shakes hands with Col. Rodney Gibson, 65th Air Base Wing Commander, after signing a Portuguese civilian wage increase package. The new deal will give local Portuguese workers an extra 3.8 percent which is retroactive to July 1.

Portuguese get raise

SSgt. Rosaire Bushey
Editor

An agreement signed Monday by Brigadeiro Jorge Costa, Headquarters Azores Air Zone Commander, and Col. Rodney Gibson, 65th Air Base Wing Commander, puts into effect a 3.8 percent pay raise for local Portuguese workers on base. The raise is retro-active to July 1.

"More than anything else I believe this raise is well deserved by the hundreds of Portuguese civilians who are integral parts of Team Lajes," Gibson said.

The raise is tied to a recently completed survey and several local economic factors. The increase is also approved jointly by both the U.S. Forces Azores and the Headquarters Azores Air Zone.

Why fix it if it's not broke?

MSgt Thomas Lanese,
65th CES Mechanical superintendent

During the next couple of months you may notice some of the commissary's refrigeration/freezer cabinets shut down and empty. This inconvenience is necessary to complete an extensive retrofit project on the mechanical equipment. Although it may appear that the equipment is operating trouble free, major system repairs are necessary. In addition, all five commissary refrigeration systems use ozone depleting gases which must be removed from service and replaced with new, non-destructive refrigerant gases.

The impact on shoppers will be minimized as much as possible. We will perform upgrades in five phases, requiring only 20% of the refrigerator/freezer cabinets to be shut down at any one time. Phase I has already been accomplished having no impact on the shoppers since it was the air conditioning/dehydration system. The store manager will relocate frozen/refrigerated foods from shut down cabinets to ensure the availability of various food selections that we are accustomed to. In addition, our civil engineer mechanics will perform most of the work at low patronage hours and on Sundays and Mondays.

This project is scheduled to be complete by the end of August. Once completed, our commissary will have a very dependable and serviceable refrigeration system. For questions or comments please call Customer Service at 23335 or email us at CEO@ce65.lajes.af.mil.

Paintless aircraft could save billions

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — Some aircraft of the future will wear a different coat of paint - no paint, in fact. A lightweight decal-type application, Department of Defense officials said, could save billions in fuel and maintenance costs while helping the environment.

The Joint Strike Fighter Program - an Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps initiative - together with the 3M Corp. and Boeing Co., has developed technology to replace exterior paint on military aircraft, creating the first military "paintless aircraft."

"Paintless aircraft technology represents an environmental breakthrough for the military that has the potential to save DOD billions," said Sherri Goodman, deputy undersecretary of defense for environmental security.

The majority of all hazardous materials associated with aircraft comes from painting and repainting

Air Force Worldview

No recall on service dress coats for women

WRIGHT-PATTERSON AIR FORCE BASE, Ohio (AFNS) — Contrary to earlier reports, there is no recall of defective enlisted women's service dress coats; however, there is a current focus on customers who may be having welt pocket alignment appearance difficulties with their enlisted women's service dress coats.

These difficulties do not result from defective coats but from the lack of a universal fit of this type of styling on women of different sizes and shapes, according to Air Force Clothing Division officials.

Concerns were raised last fall on the appearance of the welt pocket which is used to align ribbons. While the coats fit a large majority of people, on a small number of women the welt appears slanted when worn. Because of the pocket's location, its appearance varies depending on bust size, location and posture, say officials.

The number of enlisted women's coats affected could not be determined, since the appearance varies on each individual. In a continuous improvement effort, the clothing division has subsequently repositioned the welt to enhance the alignment on different body types.

When buying a new coat, or any uniform item, clothing division officials advise customers to try on the item before purchasing to make certain it has the appropriate fit and appearance. The welt on the service dress coat should appear horizontal when worn to allow for the proper placement of ribbons. Although the welt may look slanted while on the rack, it should appear horizontal once worn.

Existing coats with welt pockets that appear significantly slanted should be returned to the military clothing sales store for exchange. Replacement of chevrons is not included, as some customers had been previously advised, say clothing division officials. Sewing on chevrons will be provided as a regular, authorized alteration.
